DEPOSIT AGREEMENT

Information

Definitions:

- ELTE CSS RDC: the operator and administrator of the ELTE CSS RDC Repository, hereinafter referred to as RDC
- ELTE TK KDK Repository: the repository of RDC, hereinafter referred to as the KDK Repository
- Depositor: the person (or persons) who completes the Deposit Agreement and hands over the Collection specified therein to RDC
- Collection: research material(s) that the Depositor hands over to the RDC for storage in a single package
- Archiving: the long-term storage and preservation of the Collection in the KDK Repository
- Publication: making the Collection publicly available in the KDK Repository under the specified conditions
- Access: making the Collection, or individual files within the Collection accessible for reading, citation, and reuse under the specified conditions
- User: a person who requests access to the Collection or to individual documents within the Collection, or who accesses, views, and/or downloads such materials without requesting access due to their open access status

By signing this Deposit Agreement, the Depositor authorizes and permits the KDK Repository to archive, publish, and make available the Collection specified in this Deposit Agreement, together with the accompanying descriptive information (metadata). The specific conditions of access are set forth in this Deposit Agreement.

Please provide the basic information (metadata) required for archiving and documentation on the Data Sheet, as this will enable the Collection to be searchable and allow for its reuse. Once the basic data provided here is entered into the KDK Repository, the Depositor may be required to provide additional data via the KDK Repository's online interface. In such cases, we will notify the Depositor.

The RDC declares that it is merely the custodian and publisher of the deposited Collection, copyright and related rights are not transferred to it. The KDK Repository may grant Access to Users only on the basis of the documentation provided by the Depositor (the content of this Deposit Agreement).
